B

1. Birju and Hira left the village to find new ways to earn money in the city.
2. Birju and Hira worked on many jobs over a few months in the city. Hira was honest and hard-working, while Birju was lazy and careless. Birju always left his share of the work unfinished, which Hira would pick up after finishing his own work.
3. Birju suggested that they hide their money bag in a pit under a tree in an orchard close to Madhopur.
4. Birju believed that he ought to be the rightful owner of all the money in the pit because it was his idea to go to the city to earn money.
5. When Birju met Hira in the village, he requested Hira to go with him to the pit to take out some money.
6. The chief agreed to go to the Tree Goddess because he believed that the Tree Goddess would have seen the person who stole the money and might help them.
7. a) The chief said this to Rattan.
b) The punishment was Rattan getting burns from the fire that Hira set around the tree to expose Birju's lie. Rattan deserved it because he was hiding in the tree and pretending to be the Tree Goddess.
