Class - IX Subject - English Topic: A friend found in music

Answer the following questions:

Q. What images does the poet use to describe music in the given lines?
Ans. The poet uses the images of an ocean, shore, and rhythm to describe music. These images show that music is vast and powerful like the ocean and has a steady beat that strongly attracts and emotionally affects the poet.

Q. What does the line "music moves me to the core" suggest about the poet's feelings?
Ans. The line suggests that music deeply influences the poet's emotions. It does not affect only the surface feelings but reaches the poet's innermost thoughts and emotions, creating a strong personal and emotional connection.

Q. What can be inferred about the poet's emotional dependence on music from the given lines?
Ans. It can be inferred that the poet relies on music for emotional support. Whenever the poet feels sad or discouraged, music helps improve the mood and gives strength to overcome difficulties.

Q. Do you think music can truly act as therapy for people? Explain based on the extract.
Ans. Yes, music can act as therapy because it has the power to calm the mind and reduce sadness. The extract shows that music improves the poet's mood and gives emotional strength during difficult times.

Ans. The given poem highlights the value of using positive and healthy ways to cope with sadness and difficult situations. The poet describes music as a form of therapy that helps during moments of sadness. This shows the importance of finding constructive methods to manage emotions instead of giving in to negativity. Music lifts the poet's spirits and gives strength to face challenges, which reflects the value of emotional resilience. It also suggests that simple things like music can bring comfort and hope when life becomes difficult. The poem encourages people to seek healthy emotional support systems that help them overcome problems. Overall, the lines promote the idea that music and other creative forms can help maintain mental well-being and provide the motivation needed to move forward in life.

Q. The poet describes music as a "needed friend" that offers comfort when no one else seems to care. Critically examine how the poet presents music as a reliable companion. In your answer, discuss why music can sometimes provide support similar to that of a human friend and what this idea suggests about the role of music in a person's emotional life. Support your response with ideas from the poem.

Ans. The poet presents music as more than just a source of pleasure—it acts as a loyal companion that is present in both joyous and lonely moments. By calling music a "needed friend," the poet emphasizes its reliability and emotional significance. Music provides comfort and reassurance when no one else seems to care, showing its ability to fill emotional voids. The lines suggest that music has the power to connect deeply with human emotions, offering a sense of understanding and support that can be as impactful as a human friend. Through this portrayal, the poet encourages readers to recognize music as a vital source of emotional strength and companionship in their own lives.
